

The Donald K. Johnson Icelandic Film Series is organized by the Icelandic National League of North America, a non-profit service organization that promotes Icelandic heritage and culture through its activities and the activities of member clubs across North America. The film series is funded by a generous grant from Donald K. Johnson.

Summation: When Anna and her boyfriend Ingi decide to sell the house Anna has recently inherited from her late father Ofeig, the father's ghost appears and makes one thing perfectly clear: his house won't be sold! Prospective buyers are chased away by very strange events, which confirm that Ofeig, the ghost, is no different from what he was in life: a charming, but egoistic, alcoholic womanizer. Ingi tries to exorcise Ofeig, but the poltergeist world proves a tricky one. Instead of getting rid of Ofeig, another ghost is raised - a jealous former girlfriend of Ofeig. The dead lovers' bickering makes life in the house intolerable, the ghosts get ever more forceful, and selling the house is out of the question. But sometimes even ghosts can get too greedy. When Ofeig tries to drag an innocent lady into his dimension, the situation calls for drastic measures.

This movie is in Icelandic with English Subtitles!

Beware: The Spooks and Spirits has entered this film. There are two mysterious blackouts in this film, which last approx. 60 seconds each time. In the 1st blackout 'Ingi and Anna talk about the séance and how it might work... when the black spot ends, they are still discussing it.' In the 2nd blackout 'this continues the scene in which the 'other woman' shows up at the house having been invited when Ofeig had taken possession of Ingi's body.... Anna is upset, feeling he has been unfaithful and throws him out, along with the 'other woman' Again, the scene continues at the end of the black spot...'
